

Legal Research

Legal research is the procedure of identifying and arranging necessary information to support legal decision-making. It is the process of finding relevant cases and legislation using textbooks, journal articles, and other secondary sources of law. Legal research also includes the process of verifying that the relevant law is still valid and not overruled, repealed, otherwise questioned or criticized. Legal research can help to find out whether a legal issue is a “case of first impression” that is unregulated or lacks legal precedent. Every attorney has to review statutes, case-law and secondary authority before deciding how to proceed with the case. Legal research gives an attorney an idea of how things may be played out in the court. Computer assisted legal research open a window to ever-expanding online library with which legal research can be comprehensive, easy to use and up-to-date. Sources of legal research cover a huge range from printed books to online portals. Legal information portals are also informative sources for legal research. LexisNexis, Westlaw, Wolters Kluwer, Bloomberg Law are the top legal research portals.

We, with our team of experts conduct legal research with a professional attitude. We ensure research with a guaranteed information and validity. We have a great experience in providing researches using online portals like LexisNexis, Westlaw, and other sources. We gather information from these secondary sources to understand the issue and to make a lead to perform in front of the jury. Our services include-

- ❖ Skilled legal support staffs work with leading LexisNexis, Westlaw & other online portals
- ❖ Delivering accurate and valid information according to the work-style of the attorney
- ❖ Quick response with the workflow
- ❖ Comprehensive legal research
- ❖ Maintaining proper judicial order
- ❖ 24/7 committed to work